

Character, Education and Faith: A Trinity of Success

Trinity Academy's small school feel and big school resources give students the tools they need to succeed.

Middle school can be a tough time. But Trinity Academy in Hudson is well-equipped to help students through it with a combination of small-school stewardship and large-school resources.

"Because of our student to teacher ratio and focus on character, education and faith, we are able to set students up for success, which is very beneficial during those tumultuous middle school years," Principal Alison Johnson says.

Trinity is a private Christian K-8 school with early childhood education and year-round care options as well. Though the school is small, its investment in your child's education far outweighs its size.

"Within the context of being a small school, we have a lot of the opportunities a big school would have," Johnson says.

Those opportunities are matched by the school's resources. In addition to a full-featured science lab and brand-new math curriculum, Trinity offers Chromebooks for every middle school student to use and state-of-the-art classroom learning equipment.

It's not all about academics, though. Trinity places special emphasis on your child's spiritual development.

"We incorporate faith into our daily work," says Johnson. "By the time your child graduates, we want them to know who they are so they can stand firm not just in their faith but in who they are in their character."

This may sound expensive, but it's hard to put a price tag on the package of character, moral, and academic formation that Trinity offers.

"We have very reasonable tuition for families," Johnson says, "with the hopes that anyone who desires a Christian education, we're able to help them figure out how to afford that."

"Our mission is to provide academic excellence and develop young leaders who love God, love others and learn to serve," Johnson says.
